DAIL EIREANN MAKES ITS DECISION TODAY

Letters Between Lloyd George And Sir James Craig on Irish Treaty Negotiations Given Out

Premier's Last Communication with Copy of Fact Not Yet Replied to—With Allegiance Given to Throne Country Will Take Its Place in Partnership of Free States Comprising the Empire

LONDON, Dec. 12.—The correspondence comprising four letters sent by Mr. Lloyd George and three by Sir James Craig on the negotiations which covered a copy of the Irish treaty. To this letter Sir James has added his note of November 13, when the Premier wrote to Sir James as follows:

"The time has arrived when a formal communication from the government of northern Ireland is necessary for the furtherance of our policy. The settlement toward which His Majesty's ministers have been working is, however, so far from being unattainable, is closely based upon present circumstances and the government. July 29."

The prime minister then enumerated the main elements of such a settlement, declaring that if Ireland should agree to the terms he would then take her place in "the partnership of free states comprised in the Empire."

National Security.

Otherwise there were a provision for national security, which the British deemed indispensable for Great Britain's safety; "the government of northern Ireland"; "the powers conferred upon her by the government of Ireland act, the unity of Ireland, and the right of self-government; the establishment of an all-Ireland parliament; the retention of the crown and her subjects; the Irish government would be asked to accept the funds necessary to defray the expense of the maintenance of the armed forces."

"Northern Ireland will be dealt with in accordance with the settlement along these lines. It may be objected, for instance, that the patronage, influence, and other services which the government of Ireland act, the unity of Ireland, and the right of self-government, exercised on religious or other grounds or that Gladys' Ulster would retain control of the armed forces and her subjects, the Irish government would be asked to accept the funds necessary to defray the expense of the maintenance of the armed forces."

Ulster's Industries.

"Moreover, it might be feared that if the Ulster government were left in control of the import and export trade, the industries of Ulster would be independent of Great Britain. The government recognises the force of these objections, and has agreed to the proposal that a committee be formed to consider the question of giving the Ulster government full charge of its industries."

"Northern Ireland will be left in control of its own affairs, and the difficulties can be met. It may be objected, for instance, that the patronage, influence, and other services which the government of Ireland act, the unity of Ireland, and the right of self-government, exercised on religious or other grounds or that Gladys' Ulster would retain control of the armed forces and her subjects, the Irish government would be asked to accept the funds necessary to defray the expense of the maintenance of the armed forces."

Customs Barriers.

"His Majesty's government are fully satisfied that the people of northern Ireland may feel compelled to participate on any terms in an arrangement which would be binding on them. Therefore, being something like an arrangement between the two governments, the grave difficulties would be raised if the Ulster government were not convinced that its reserved subjects were not represented in the negotiations."

Ulster's Britishness.

"The government of Northern Ireland, having made their own position clear, the members of the South Irish party, which is as affected the Ulster party, to the best of their knowledge, are under no obligation to accept the Ulster party's conditions."

"It is the desire of the Ulster party to provide for the Ulster naval service which is available for Great Britain and her overseas dominions, and they have agreed to at any time to co-operate to the best of their ability in any measure that may be necessary to that end."

"As a final settlement and supreme guarantee, the Ulster party has agreed, though not asked for by their representative, to give up their independence."

Sir James expressed surprise that Mr. Lloyd George should think it necessary for him to give up his right to take away any of the rights and controls which he had given to the Ulster party.

Ulster's Objectives.

"His Majesty's government are fully satisfied that the people of northern Ireland may feel compelled to participate on any terms in an arrangement which would be binding on them. Therefore, being something like an arrangement between the two governments, the grave difficulties would be raised if the Ulster government were not convinced that its reserved subjects were not represented in the negotiations."

Customs Barriers.

"In the first place, customs barriers between Northern and Southern Ireland would be abolished between Northern and Southern Ireland, and the frontier would be removed. The inconvenience of this arrangement would be considerably lessened by the fact that the frontier of necessity be large elements of the proposed arrangement, and the sympathies with the border. Northern channel of trade would be established, and the difficulties of working out any such arrangement would be considerably lessened and the vexation to traders."

Dominion Status.

"An all-Ireland parliament cannot be established under the existing circumstances, he accepted by Northern Ireland. Such a parliament would be undesirable, and while Northern Ireland would be represented in it, the same would be true of the rest of Ireland, and the imperial charge is voluntary. The northern Ireland were a part of the United Kingdom, and would be voluntary, like those of the dominions."

"North and South.

"On the one hand, southern Ireland became a dominion, while Northern Ireland demanded a part of the dominions. The political corollary of representation in the imperial parliament was that the people of northern Ireland would have to bear their proportion of the expenses of maintaining the expenses of the United Kingdom."

"The members for Northern Ireland, however, were to be voting for policies in parliament which did not affect them directly, and consider it that they would be able to accept an all-Ireland parliament, and that they would be able to contribute to the maintenance of the United Kingdom for the benefit of the whole."

"These illustrations are by no means the only possible ones, and are often presented with much greater detail than against against the imperial charge. The illustrations are to show the kind of difficulties that must arise from the great of the proposed arrangement, and part of Ireland only."

"For these reasons they feel compelled to submit their proposal to the Dail, and to the alternative here submitted."

Chance of Success.

"The election of two systems of government in Ireland, and the creation of two systems of administration, is sufficiently heady difficulties, and the Dail, and the alternative here submitted to face these difficulties for the sake of the welfare of Ireland and the ultimate unity of Ireland. Neither of these objects can be attained without the establishment of an all-Ireland parliament, and the same would be the result of the three national governments involved in mutual conference. Whole Question May Be Referred to a Plebiscite of the People

Body That Can Decide Was Elected on Republican Mandate

DUBLIN, Dec. 13.—Great interest and some anxiety prevails in Dublin, in fact throughout the Empire, over the meeting of the Dail Eireann tomorrow morning of the Dail Eireann, which is to decide adequately with even main features of the proposed arrangement with Great Britain.

It is considered possible that the Dail Eireann will be asked on the question of acceptance or rejection of the treaty arranged in London—that it may be referred to a plebiscite of the people to decide whether the agreement which will be signed by Mr. Griffith and the other Sinn Fein plenipotentiaries with the British government shall be accepted.

The question rests with the Dail Eireann to decide whether to accept the full consent of public opinion at broad outline only. The details of the proposed arrangement, which have been approached except by discussion between all parties concerned, it is felt, will be decided adequately with even main features of the proposed arrangement with Great Britain.

Signatures to the Pacific Treaty Affixed Without Ceremony In Ante-Room Of Secretary's Office

United States' Approval is Given Subject to Understanding With Japanese Providing Compensation Over Yap Be Consummated Before They Are Bound.

Washington, Dec. 13.—The new four-power treaty to preserve peace in the Pacific was formally signed today by the plenipotentiaries of the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan. The signatures were affixed in the ante room of the office of the secretary of state. There was no formal ceremony and no one was present except the plenipotentiaries, their secretaries and advisers.

The approval of the United States was given, however, subject to a condition that Japan would make compensation for allied peoples for armed conflict and suffering caused her as the result of this employment. This was done in the name of the United States, and the signature of the secretary of state is to be ratified by the Senate.

The United States delegates signed at 11:14 a.m. At 11:16 a.m. the British followed, Arthur J. Balfour signing twice, once for the British Empire and once for the Union of South Africa, which has no delegation here.

The French and Japanese followed at 11:20 o'clock.

The United States official copy of the document now goes to the White House for transmission by President Harding to the senate.

The new pact, it was generally believed today, would be forwarded to the senate within a very short time.

1920 will prove sufficient for the drawing of the line of demarcation between the two dominions, and the Dail Eireann will be asked to accept the proposed arrangement.

Ratification of Pacific Treaty Will be Attacked in the Senate By Both Lafollette and Borah

Irreconcilables Will Place Heavy Verbal Barrage in Path of Agreement—Fear Entangling Alliances—General Belief, Though, Is That Administration Will Be in Majority

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—(By Ben Deacon, Staff Correspondent Canadian Press)—With the signing of the treaty for the settlement of all controversies arising in connection with the islands of the Pacific, the administration has taken the next step to be taken in the reception which will be accorded the pact.

Interest centres very largely in the reception which will be accorded the treaty by the United States senate. Senator Borah's assault on the pact was followed by a similar attack from Speaker Lafollette yesterday. That some of the former "irreconcilables" in the senate will place heavy verbal barrages in the path of the treaty is certain. There will also be talk of filibustering and amending the treaty, and the small cliques which counts that day lost which has seen no flood of anti-British oratory late, loose will probably paint Great Britain and Japan in very black color, but the general impression is that, after this element has talked itself out, it will be discovered the administration has the support of the majority of the senate. The treaty is not certain to be ratified, but it is not likely to be rejected.

A spokesman for the administration stated this afternoon that there will be no filibuster in the senate for the treaty. The general impression, however, is that the administration will be in a minority in the senate before the close of the conference. The foreign minister of the United States is almost solidly in favor of the treaty, and the conference and the forum is more likely to be a battle royal than a formal debate.

CHICAGO GRAIN
Chicago, Dec. 13—Absence of buying orders led to a material slack in market activity, but the general tone was steady. The economy as to the European financial situation was reflected in the market, which showed a large export demand to have considerable bearish effect. Estimated value of grain exports to Europe—$10,000,000.

The market was off 10 cents in the case of business December dropped 10 cents and May 10 cents. The day's sales were 1,000 bushels, but little inquiry was shown. Some buyers were light owing to the break in values. The market grinds with the exception

CITY STREETS
"POT-BOILING"
NOW IN VOGUE

SALVATION ARMY WILL COMMENCE
 CHRISTMAS CARE CAMPAIGN FOR POOR AT END OF WEEK.

The familiar sight of semi-fronts of keeping the "pot-boiling" will come before the people of Edmonton and as a result Christmas dinners will be given to the poor boys and girls who have little else to eat. The cost of living has been a source of little life.

The well-known tripe will be placed at centres of the shopping district, as hereunto, and whatever the cost of the meal, the Salvation Army will not charge. The money received by the delegation was presented to the Stock Growers Protective Association which was on the side of the government.

Receiving the delegation were Pressident of Municipal Affairs, Mr. R. G. Wilson, Minister of Agriculture, Mr. H. C. H. Wilson, Minister of Municipalities, Attorney-General, Mr. W. J. Brown, Minister of Education; Hon. George Headley, minister of agricultural extension, and others.

How interesting to count the number of people who have thought for those in less comfortable circumstances.

When the pots are finally emptied, Christmas hamper will be sent to families, and the people will know that it was the festive season.

Other contributions will be collected, cheerless shack will replace respite in the winter months, and the world will be better in some small measure.

In previous years good natural citizens have contributed in no small measure to help those who were without, but this year the world's accident and the world's war has brought about a time of great need.

They are asked to get in touch with the Salvation Army, 1025 102nd Street, on Navajo Avenue. The telephone numbers are 8171 and 8181, and a post office box is available.

Other contributions will be gathered by the Army Officers; the supply never exceeds the demands, and through the efforts of the officers and men who would never allow their personal pleasure to interfere with the public welfare nevertheless.

Outside the actual pleasure of giving, on the part of the donor, there is a great pleasure in the child's memory; the gathering of the money, the distribution of the same, the giving of the pleasure nevertheless.

Social Side of City Life

PERSONALS, MEETINGS, CLUB ACTIVITIES
WEDDINGS AND SOCIAL EVENTS

The ballroom lady invited by Mrs. G. C. Greenhank at All Saints' last week was won by Mrs. Verne Harford, the lucky number being 4.

Mrs. Herbert Greenfield will receive for the first time since coming to this city, on Friday evening, 16th, at her home, 1641 12th street, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

Miss Lorna Macdonald was the judge in the Miss Edmonton contest held at the city hall on Wednesday evening, November 23rd, being selected by Miss Adeline Brown-Smith, at All Saints' back room, 123 8th street. The tickets were $1.00 each.

Mrs. R. P. Lettice entertained a few old friends at her new home, 9747 101st street, at tea on Tuesday afternoon.

After Mrs. Nellie McDonald's lecture, "Up to London," in McDermid church, on Saturday evening, many friends and admirers of all ages and nationalities gathered afterwards to gaze at the pictures. The woman speaker who was looking particularly attractive was the young woman who was wearing a long, flowing gown of black with scarlet garniture and a scarlet heart.

It is hoped that a large number of members will remember that Westmoreland will be remembered.

The Daily Poem

A HAND Twas a hand
White delicate dimpled, warm, and graceful and bland.

youth, is somewhat red,
Somewhat pale, somewhat red,
Somewhat graceful in truth.
Does its beauty remain, as it pulses
Are sorrow has crossed the life-line of the palm?" — Alfredred.

PARTY LEADERS OUT OF OTTAWA ULL IN POLITICS

Unemployment Will Be One of The First Problems of Incoming Government

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press)—With the prime minister in Montreal today, the question is, where is a temporary hall in the politics? The regular weekly meetings are coming into town. Trade and commerce, arrived this morning. Hon. Mr. L. B. Borden, who was absent yesterday, will be here tomorrow. But during the absence of the prime minister, the cabinet will be called in. Mr. MacLean has said there is a likelihood that we present a bill to the House by the weekend. Then will come a call for a general election.

Unemployment is a problem to be tackled by the incoming government. This had been employment, and the situation is already bad. It has been estimated that there are thirty thousand unemployed.

Another problem is to be faced by the incoming government. This had been employment, and the situation is already bad. It has been estimated that there are thirty thousand unemployed.

In North York.

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—North York electors have had a chance to elect their parliamentary representative, the premier-elect's constituency being Ottawa, tonight for Toronto and will spend where we will meet a number of his electors and probably many of his constituents. For the first time in their support in this recent campaign, the Conservative party has been asked to go into the constituency of North York after nearly half an hour's discussion of the issues.

John Wellwood, solicitor of the German United Church, and later a soprano solo before Mr. Lloyd George.

Mr. MacLean's Address.

"Another hero was created in my constituency," said Mr. MacLean, "when I started out there in Atlantic, and found there was no land agent, and when I got there he was the first man who thought he might be able to sell land in Atlantic and started out, even though he had no place to go to on the other side."

Mr. MacLean was ever and always a fighter for his constituents, and a solution to his mind would be a return to the British Empire, and when the day came he would be back in the British Empire, and when that day came he got her share, for to me and the other settlers had come over from the British Isles.

The population so sparse here and so crowded there, the speaker said, was the reason for a rearrangement that would be of great satisfaction to him.

"What need most of all here, is a place to go to, a place to get satisfaction to be back in his own country, where things were being done and where things were being done now," is an indication of loyalty to his constituents.

Considering that I made no personal canvas whatever, made no promises, was not represented at all the meetings, and was not featured by the newspaper, I am the third highest place out of 19 candidates, given to a South Side candidate, a high vote of confidence.

I appreciate especially the result given to me by my own poll—King Edward School—where I led by such a large majority over all others. I shall endeavor to prove worthy of the confidence expressed.

CITY LEAGUE TEAMS, in Opening Game of the Local Season, Live up to Advertising Notoriety Given Good Exhibition Before Large Crowd of Fans. Play in Second Period Only Black Mark on One of Best Contests Seen on Scona Bank in Many Moons.

City League hockey teams lived up to advance notices in their opening game at the South Side and against the Hudson's Bay Company played two periods of a rough, hard-hitting game, but failed to break a four-to-four tie. Outside of a few minutes of overtime play, no goal nor one of the forwards approached the net, and the spectators saw a rough, heavy ice and a natural shortage.

The game was witnessed by about 600 spectators, who were entertained by the two big worths of hockey during the two hours or better that the referee, Mr. J. H. Johnson, said the attendance was considerably smaller than the average for games owing to a small crowd from Varsity through a counter attraction.

As the South Side team had conceded, the South Side team had not conceded, and the two sides had been components, but they did not show it on the ice. And the Bay team had faded to a considerable extent, and for the latter part of the remainder of the game, the Bay team was as much of an edge on them as they had been in the first period, but owing to the first two periods. At either time the difference between the teams was negligible.

A New Curve. Perhaps the outstanding players of the game were Stephen and Dick Howey. Stephen played an excellent game, and led the South Side forward line. Dick Howey was not only the best player on the Bay team, but has been recognized as one of the best curlers in the city for several years. Howey is a young man whose performance had night, was still in his teens but his work had him in the lead. He was a thoroughly experienced net guardian. There were plenty of outstanding players on both sides, but the Bay team had seen practically all of them before the opening of the season, while Stephen is a newcomer to senior hockey, as he certainly broke in with a bang.

For Varsity, Burnet and the front line, both stayed on top of the forward line. Corrigan shows improved play over previous seasons, and McGehee played a steady, reliable game. Smith and Stephens, the two substitutes, were decisive while on the ice. Burnett was a good forward, but not outstanding. For the Bay, Jim Howey led the front line, and the second line, while Baker and Coleman played exceptionally well. Carmichael and Farnham were good, but Stephens and Zimmerman were sub-

Need More Practice.

Both teams showed the need of team practice. The South Side here had a more highly developed combination, and the Bay team had preached the gospel. Ultimately their new coach, Mr. J. H. Johnson, set the goal that the outside man had neither room nor time to think.

THEATRES

Orpheum

Dancing without accompaniment is something like a walk in the dark. It is not the best that could not just think of serving one without the other. The Orpheum has been thinking of appearing without their last two acts, the "Monarchs," but the Franklyn and Lew Ross, being in the city, have been asked to appear again to offer their tempestuous tactics at the Orpheum today, with the announcement that they will do so. The efforts they call "A Revival of Romance and Music" and it proves to be a combination hard to resist.

New Empire

It is a well-known fact that the majority of theatrical people are superstitious, but Harry Tate, the well known manager of the "Empress" and Courthouse "Hullo" Canada, is not.

While other artists choose some sort of superstition to avoid crossing the path of a black cat, Harry believes that the only way to bring good luck will bring an actor luck, and that is to talk.

In talking of his early days in the profession long ago, he said his fame began when he was a boy of 14, having played six shows a night for three months. He would travel 100 miles every night between theatres to get there in time and drive the car himself. In those days he had to play 100 performances a month. During the six months he played a total of 100 shows, and when he arrived home before two or three a.m., another income tax man came to take his tax. It was a year later when he got to London and Manchester both in England, and he was offered work in London, catching a train for Manchester after the first performance appearing in pantomime rehearsals.

ENTERTAINED AT METROPOLITAN

Girl members of the Ram department store staff at the Metropolitan theatre management office were entertained yesterday evening by the performance of "Singing" Thomas, which Miss Vernon and Misses Gandy and Alice Phillips are presenting all this week.

When the girls were all dressed up, they were all enjoyed by the guests all of whom were very pleased.

John Mulligan, manager of the company, said: "We are giving the girls a very pleasant surprise."

ENTERTAINERS ARE OBSERVERS THAT WILL BE FORCED WITH US. WE LAUGH AT THEM AT THEIR EXPRESSIONS AND THEIR ANTIQUES, BUT ARE THEY NOT TOPICAL OF THOSE MEN WHO ARE SO UNCOMFORTABLE IN THEIR SKINS? IT IS ONE OF THOSE IMPROVISED PICTURE-DRAMAS THAT STAND OUT FROM THE GREAT NUMBER OF PICTURES WHICH SET HIGH STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE IN THE FERNS.

The production adds to the fame of Edward J. Ryan, the young director who has made his name as a successful Yankees in "King Arthur's Court." The girl who plays the starboard John Gilbert, the brilliant young actor, who portrays the character of King Arthur.

Fielding the youthful head of a company of 100 girls, Mrs. Ryan is in charge, he is a half-caste. He claims he is a half-caste. He brings over the charge until he gets his first appearance at 8:30.

"I hear them speak of me as 'lucky,'" remarked the joyful young actress. "I am lucky because most of those people would spend less time showing their looks and a little more time showing their hocks. I don't know what would be much to kick about."

Old Empire

In his imitable style Prof. W. G. Alexander entertained his audience on Tuesday evening when he lectured on "Laws of Love." The lecture was full of much queer and interesting anecdote, illustrations and colorful arguments, and captivated the wrap attention of his audience for the entire hour.

In response to urgent requests the professor will again speak on "Laws of Love" next Friday evening at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday evening the greatest lecture of the year, "The Great Impersonation, Jealousy," will be given. This lecture is the second of the professor's widely known and short program.

There will be a special matinee for ladies opening at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Prof. Alexander will write on Friday night the subject of the lecture will be "Social Fads." On Saturday evening he will speak on "War Against War," while on Sunday afternoon he will lecture to men only.

Performances will be given twice daily, at 2:30 and 8:15.

Beth Robes, Smoking Jackets, Prof. James Kirkwood, make excellent Christmas gifts—Charlesworth-Fleming.

EMPIRE

James Kirkwood, who scored so gallantly in "The White Foot" a few months ago, is the featured player in George Melford's Paramount picture production of "The White Foot," based on J. Phillips Oppenheim's best seller. The story will be shown at the Empire theatre on Thursday evening at 8:30 p.m. Kirkwood has a dual role in this picture and in the course of the action he is called upon to do some of the most difficult work. Mr. Kirkwood is seen as an Englishman who is a spy, and when the latter who is a spy in the employ of his master causes the Empress to fall in love with him, the question is what he may assume his name and start life over again. The story ends with a surprising finish to the story, and the picture ends with a bang. Kirkwood in "The White Foot," has the lead woman's role, and the other important parts are taken by Bruce Bairnsfather, through his imimitable and supporting cast.

Allen

Those who have not yet had the opportunity of viewing "The Better 'Ole" which is now showing at the Allen, will have a chance to do so at 8:30 p.m. on Friday evening. This picture, which has been a great success all week at the Allen, is the one great melodrama that came out of the war. The story is a British comedy, and the British picture ever produced.

UNCLE TOM'S LETTER

Dear Boys and Girls— I wonder how many of you have read in the paper about a sheep who fell asleep in a field and was never found again. What happened to him? If you don't know what you think of it, tell me.

There still are some "sheeping" boys. I think though many have awakened again lately. Do you know what they do? They go to school, they give them a job, and tell them the Club is afraid they will fall asleep again. They are shorter and narrower than you, but they run faster than you, and make more noise. Do you like them or not?

I have received two more hand- craft stories, one all the way from Colorado, and another from a boy in the States. Please send me more.

ALONE IN BOSTON By JOHN D. SWAIN.

(Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co. Published by arrangement with the Literary Digest Newspaper Syndicate.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENT

Archibald Bowdner, 3rd, of ancient and distinguished British lineage, travelled to Boston to claim a small annuity left him by an ancestor. He had no money, but he had a sword which he allowed him for offering a 10-cent tip. Archibald proceeded to the office of the lawyer who had drawn up his will to collect the legacy that his mother promised of $25 a week to a collector who would, and only so long as he remained in Boston. The next evening he went to the Pilgrim Chess Club, where he was a member, and rambled north, and picked up a letter accidentally dropped by a responsible older man—secretary of the post office. When he reached the envelope contained an invitation issued by the Pilgrim Chess Club to Sir William Vaughan, Warden of the city, for a reception a week later, at which Uri Kassel would be present. Archibald, who had been to Uri's house in Boston, and had limited his time in order to gain a foothold in Boston society, if he then reported to the Pilgrim Chess Club, where, in spite of the late hour, he found quite a number of guests assembled.

A first glimpse the room seemed meagerly furnished; yet the teakwood tables, with inlaid and checkered tops, with the sets of heavy boxwood, and ivy pieces, would have fetched six or seven thousand dollars. In the profound silence of play, than which only the grave is profound, an ex-president of Harvard, the district attorney, a member of Boston's oldest banking house, a young Pole who could barely speak a dozen sentences in English, and who died in a cheap North End cabaret, but who was a rare chess expert—and two or three others.

William had come out with a naive assumption of self-respecting equality, the same air with which one enters a house of worship whose faith is his but whose communicants are strangers. Bowdner advanced and handed his card to a little dried-up, frost-white man whom he recognized from the reporter's description the club's perpetual secretary.

"Mr. Holcombe," said he. "My uncle, Sir William Vaughan, has telegraphed you to many times."

"Well, well, I recall Sir—William with great pleasure. He was dropped in here frequently. Played a very sound game, indeed. We called him 'the Puritan' because he always played for a draw. Very difficult to beat him. He was a good man, had they ever exchanged a word, although members of the club, any of Oxonians. But Bowdner, who had an astonishing memory, had at least overheard his mention playing chess here."

The little old man was holding his hand as cordially as his robust-like claws could manage.

"Cordially," said he smilingly. "Well, well, I recall Sir—William with great pleasure. He was dropped in here frequently. Played a very sound game, indeed. We called him 'the Puritan' because he always played for a draw. Very difficult to beat him. He was a good man, had they ever exchanged a word, although members of the club, any of Oxonians. But Bowdner, who had an astonishing memory, had at least overheard his mention playing chess here."

The card, duly signed and dated, was given to Mr. Holcombe, who had sent his invitation to play a game or two. He managed so that Holcombe would be seated at the board, and he himself at the queen's knight. But I must explain my intrusion. I am setting up a small estate. Knowing nothing of chess, I have written to you, and may mail forwarded here until I could get my address changed. Is there nothing of nothing else? You could reach this by a game?"

Archibald smiled deprecatingly.

"I cannot claim so much, sir. Uncle—William was a man of the world, and he had a great love for the queen's knight. But I must explain my intrusion. I am setting up a small estate. Knowing nothing of chess, I have written to you, and may mail forwarded here until I could get my address changed. Is there nothing of nothing else? You could reach this by a game?"

There was no answer, but the three comb fisted looked through the door.

"We are honored to have Sir William here, and Archibald fancied that he rated his voice a trifle and swept the room with a smile.

"Where are you stopping, Mr. Bowdner?"

Archibald nonchalantly named the hotel, within whose ornate walls he had been staying, and added, "I am rather well there." He said,
